Become a Friend of Joaquin Miller Park (FOJMP) and help support Oakland’s jewel in the hills. Friends of Joaquin Miller Park includes hikers, mountain bikers, equestrians, dog owners, cross country runners, historians, writers, and neighbors, all dedicated to preserving and enhancing the rich natural legacy of this 500-acre park. It was the originally the home of the late 19th-Century poet and environmentalist, Joaquin Miller, the “Poet of the Sierras.”

FOJMP is working to improve trail safety, signage and usability, restore the Joaquin Miller Abbey, enhance native understory in the redwoods, and to make other improvements that will enhance your enjoyment of the Park.

Joaquin Miller Park also needs your volunteer time to help with the planning and implementation of many of these projects. You can help plant native plants or remove invasives, contribute to trail maintenance efforts, lay stone at the Abbey restoration, help install trail signs, and contribute to the work of FOJMP committees.

FOJMP will notify members of upcoming park events and projects, and members are invited to attend the FOJMP bimonthly board meetings at Joaquin Miller Community Center, and the City’s annual volunteer recognition event.

Please visit the Joaquin Miller Park website at www.oaklandnet.com/joaquinmillerpark, where you can download a full-size color copy of the park trail map and learn about volunteer opportunities. Questions: (510) 47FOJMP (473-6567)
